

T. A. Barron Bio - Short Version

T. A. Barron grew up in Colorado ranch country and traveled widely as a Rhodes Scholar. Following his lifelong dream to become a writer, he left a successful business career in New York and returned to Colorado. Today he is the award-winning author of more than 30 highly acclaimed books, including the international bestselling series The Merlin Saga, now being developed into a feature film by Disney. Jane Goodall has called his upcoming title, Naming Nature, “a glorious celebration of nature’s beauty, a love poem to language, and a heartfelt plea to save the environment for all living creatures.” In addition to writing and speaking, T. A. Barron has helped to create several programs to support young leaders around the world, including the Patagonia program for Rhodes Scholars, the Boundless conservation fellowships at World Wildlife Fund, and the Gloria Barron Prize for Young Heroes. He also serves on many environmental and educational boards, including Princeton University, where he helped to create the High Meadows Environmental Institute, and The Wilderness Society, which recently honored him with its highest award for conservation work.
